Inergi Design Announces WonderWorks Contract

Inergi to provide a variety of interactive exhibits that both intrigue and instruct

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., March 31, 2009 –Today, Inergi Design Services, a design company offering an integrated approach to marketing and product development to fill concept-to-marketplace needs, announced they have been awarded a contract by WonderWorks to design and create an array of educational, interactive exhibits for WonderWorks as it expands from its current Orlando and Gatlinburg/Pigeon Forge locations. The hands-on experiences and activities that Inergi will provide will demonstrate imaginative and intriguing applications of physics, geology, space adventures, and more, using sophisticated graphic, virtual reality, and audio presentation techniques.

Phillip Sowder, vice president of Inergi's Design Force said, "We are excited to have this opportunity to assist WonderWorks in its expansion by providing the high-quality, imaginative, and interactive experiences that WonderWorks' guests have come to expect and for which Inergi's Design Force museum sector has earned a strong reputation. Richard Green of WonderWorks said, "We anticipate the contributions of Inergi Design to bring further success to our WonderWorks venture as it expands to accommodate the interest our guests demonstrate for quality family experiences that both motivate learning and entertain." The package of hands-on experiences to be delivered by Inergi will focus on topics that will catch the interest of a wide range of audiences.

About WonderWorks

As an "amusement park for the mind," WonderWorks (<http://www.wonderworksonline.com/>) seeks to entertain as it educates in a fun, family environment. The stimulating, interactive learning attractions feature a myriad of hands-on demonstrations and activities that draw youngsters and adults alike into a unique environment that piques the curiosity, demonstrates natural laws, and entertains – all at the same time.

About Inergi Design Services

With its roots in the high tech environment of Huntsville, Ala., Inergi (www.inergi.com) was formed in 1998 by a group already with years of experience to their credit working together as a team in exhibit design, model making, rapid prototyping, and product design. With a rich mix of entrepreneurial spirit and professional talent, the company has thrived in its current home in the historic 1920's-era Martin Industries building in the heart of the city. Today, commercial, industrial, and military clients seek out Inergi as a strategic partner. Inergi offers a complete set of services to satisfy the full range of concept-to-marketplace needs that includes design and development of products, marketing and graphic design, as well as trade show and museum exhibit design. Led by President and CEO Greg Sollie, Inergi is experiencing an exciting period of unprecedented growth as they spearhead the revitalization of the Governors Drive western business corridor into the city of Huntsville.
